The Jewish Boys' Camp Asks Helping Hand

Have you made a contribution yet to the Jewish Boys' Camp? The happiness of many a poor helpless boy depends on your generosity, and on account of so many applications coming in from these poor kids, the committee have arranged to take care of more boys, providing the immediate contribution is forthcoming from the Jewish people of this city. A thousand dollars is still required to carry on for the rest of the summer. Will you help? A visit to the camp will soon convince you that your contribution will be well spent. Some of the saddest cases heard of are taken care of by the camp. Some boys are without father or mother; one boy without parents is living with a grandmother. The grandmother has left for the States and will not return until September, so the boy is being taken care of at the camp, and is quite happy and enjoying himself. Still another case of a boy who has a mother only, broken down in health. Kind hands are taking care of the mother while the camp is taking care of the poor unfortunate boy, thus relieving the tired and worn out mother for a few weeks, as she knows her boy will be getting the proper care. There are many sad cases, but too numerous to mention. Do you not think that the camp should be supported? You are interested in the good and welfare of your own children. You take them along for their summer vacation with you. Therefore give the poor boy a chance, who cannot help himself and whose parents cannot send him away. Make a contribution to the Jewish Boys' Camp, and thereby enable such boys to obtain a breath of God's pure air, and away from the congested home in which so many of them live. Two weeks at the camp brings them back in a healthy spirit and mind and at the same time relieves the tired and worn out mother. So if you are interested in these poor kiddies and want to feel that you are doing something for our own under-privileged youngsters who are just longing to go to camp, send a cheque at once to our treasurer. You will have a wonderful feeling of satisfaction and so will that lonely child. The quicker you send the money, the more value it will have. When you are out riding on the Hamilton Highway, turn to your left at Stop 34 and pay the kiddies a visit. You will see how they will welcome you. A strictly kosher camp

Immigrant Aid Mass Meeting

The Toronto Branch, Jewish Immigrant Aid Society mass meeting will be held in the Garden of the Zionist Institute, on Sunday, July 30, at half-past ten in the morning. A report will be given of the Immigration Conference held at Ottawa during the first week in July. Addresses on immigration problems and policy, full of vital interest to every thinking Jew and Jewess, will be delivered by men who have made a careful study of the present immigration situation.

The Jewish Immigrant Aid Society of Canada has been functioning for the last two years, during which time, financial, moral and legal aid has been given to countless immigrants. Branches are now established in every Jewish community throughout the Dominion. Every immigrant, whether he be in trouble or not, is taken care of by the port office, which functions in Quebec in the summer time, and in Halifax in winter. The head office, in Montreal, has provided facilities whereby any immigrant when in need, can obtain food and sleeping accommodation. The Ottawa bureau carries on all the necessary negotiations for detained or rejected immigrants. All the branches work in co-operation with the port and head offices, by giving advice, etc., to relatives of the immigrants destined to their districts.

This, the practical side of the Society's work is now going on, with ever-increasing efficiency. But now a new phase has presented itself. A phase of work which requires careful study and intelligent understanding, not only on the part of the Society, but also on the part of each and every Jew here in Canada. It is essential that all carefully understand the full import and effect of the late immigration laws; it is essential that the Society voice its opinion, as a body, on the present immigration policy.

GREECE SUPPORTS PALESTINE MANDATE

Saloniki (J.P.A.)—Malach, Jewish member of the Cabinet declared in Parliament the readiness of the Greek government to support the British government in its effectuation of the Balfour declaration, as well as to lend its moral support to the Zionists in Palestine. To that end, instructions have been forwarded to the Greek representatives at the League conference to be held in London, to support the proposed Palestine Mandate.

An intensive Keren Hayesod Campaign is now being conducted in Greece, and Dr. Victor Jacobson, a prominent Zionist leader has come from London to assist in the campaign.

Polish Jews to Open Synagog

The Polish Jews of Toronto are arranging a grand opening for their new synagog, 23 Henry Street. Only two years ago people thought there were very few Polish Jews in Toronto, on account of their small synagog, located at 17 Elm Street, with a membership of forty-five, not noticeable and seldom heard of. In city communal affairs they took very little interest; even in their synagog affairs they were not interested. As witness to this fact, the same officers were re-elected from year to year.

Due to the efforts of the younger element in the congregation, the first change took place when Mr. B. Goldhar was elected president some years ago, resulting in the sale of the synagog at 17 Elm Street—the proceeds of the sale being $7,500—and the starting of work on the building of the new synagog.

A building committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. M. Granatstein, C. Garfunkel, B. Goldhar, N. Katz, M. Prymer, M. Brenzel, J. Cuker, D. Rotstein, B. Caplan, S. Hershenhorn, B. Tatur, P. Kamin, H. and A. Schwartz, L. Grossman, M. Goldhar, and H. Rosen. In the space of two years' time, they erected a synagog costing approximately $150,000.

They now have a membership of three hundred, and although there are few wealthy ones among them, the building will be almost paid for when the opening takes place and the pews are sold. It is said that this synagog is the peer of the synagogs in Canada. The congregation also brought over Rabbi L. Graubert from Poland as their minister, for whom all the Jews in the city have the greatest respect. It is also worthy of note that the Hebrew Free School on D'Arcy Street is practically supported by the same members and is, of course, a Polish Jewish institution. In the United Synagogs or Kehillah, Polish Jews are represented by 50 per cent of the total delegates, and undoubtedly they are now a power in communal affairs.

The officers have arranged to bring Cantor J. Rosenblatt, with his own choir, from New York for the opening of their synagog, and the committee in charge have arranged a splendid program for the occasion, which is to take place on August 18, 19 and 20.

The Ladies' Auxiliary, under the presidency of Mrs. M. Goldhar, are arranging a banquet for the night of August 20. It is to be hoped that all the Jewish people of the city will attend both the services and the opening event, which will be the finest ever arranged in the city.

Palestine Mandate Confirmed by League Council

Final confirmation was given the Palestine and Syrian mandates Saturday by the Council of the League of Nations. This means that the mandate system of government becomes effective throughout the world almost immediately.

The Earl of Balfour, Rene Viviani and Marquis Imperiali, respectively the delegates of England, France and Italy, will make declarations on Monday regarding the future policy of their Governments in the mandate areas.

Urging the confirmation of the mandates, the Earl of Balfour said yesterday that their immediate adoption was imperatively needed in order to allay the agitation and unrest among the different racial elements in the mandate areas. He said that, while custody of the holy places was of great interest and importance to the outside world, they were of little concern to the inhabitants of Palestine and Syria. M. Viviani endorsed this view. He said that France was anxious that the mandates should be accepted immediately. Marquis Imperiali, who contended for the definition of the Vatican's rights to the Holy places, yielded on this point.

The action of the council marks the culmination of three years' effort and negotiation on the part of the League to institute the mandate system in the Pacific Islands, Central Africa and Asia Minor. It is construed as a victory for the Earl of Balfour, and as giving further effect to the establishment of a Jewish national home.

The mandate for Mesopotamia automatically disappears with the creation by Great Britain of an independent state in that country. There was no real divergence of opinion regarding the Syrian mandate, but article 14 of the Palestine document, defining the functions and powers of the commission for the custody of the holy places, is now revised to meet the wishes of all the parties and the text will be announced Monday. The composition and competency of the commission will be determined by Great Britain before the next session of the assembly in September.

The officers of the synagog are as follows: Mr. C. Garfunkel, president; H. Rosen, vice-president; M. Prymer, secretary; Mr. M. Granatstein, treasurer.

It is only fair to say that it was due to the indefatigable efforts of both the president and the treasurer that this undertaking is being brought to a successful conclusion.

(New York Special to The Canadian Jewish Review)

We received the other day a letter from Russia on the envelope of which were affixed stamps to the value of sixty thousand roubles, in normal times $30,000. This envelope made us realize more than a ream of newspaper reports could, into what a chaotic condition poor Russia had fallen. And when the next day we were shown by Foshko, the artist to whom we introduced you some weeks ago, a letter from the Ukraine relating a pitiful tale of the life of professional men and women in that country we felt that we knew exactly how those people on the other side suffered. The Ukrainian letter was from an artist and stated starkly that he and his colleagues were starving to death. Local artists have organized committees and are going to do everything in their power to help, but at best that can't be very much. Every city in America ought to have one or two committees to help a class of people who are generally not known as well as their fellows in hunger. There must be good fortune even to misfortune. Every section of Europe's suffering humanity has been given material and sympathetic aid, but the artists have been kept aloof. It is only on rare occasions that we hear of something going on in their behalf.

In New York not long ago, Morris Gest, the son-in-law of David Belasco and as you know a distinguished theatrical producer himself, organized a novel benefit in aid of Russian artists. He gave a performance of the celebrated "Chauve Souris" company, which he brought over from Paris to such great advantage all around—and each minor post in the theater on that evening was taken by a prominent artist. Thus, the ticket-taker was Al Jolson, the cloak-room attendant was Barney Bernard, the program girls were the Gish sisters, the water boy Leon Errol, and so on. That evening, if we remember aright, brought in around fifteen thousand dollars.

Of course it is not given to every community to have in their midst a "Chauve Souris" and a dazzling constellation of stars, but every community has a resourceful man or woman who can drum up interesting entertainments. If any of these read this page, they should immediately raise the banner of help to the Russian artists, for they are doubly qualified, in that, being our readers, they are naturally also artistically minded.

The subject of Russian artists leads us to a young Russian artist in this country who is gaining an enviable reputation. She is Bashka Paeff, of Boston. Miss Paeff has just finished a Boston war memorial, one glorifying the memory of war chaplains resident in Massachusetts who had made the last sacrifice in their work of kindness. The memorial, a tablet, will be unveiled this month in the new Hall of Fame at the Capitol.

Miss Paeff has had an interesting career. Akin to many another fine talent, she was one of a large family who came to America in the steerage. She had a stiff struggle to achieve her ambition. For years, while she studied she worked on the Boston subway as a ticket-agent and at the Park Street station she could be seen every day efficiently handing out the correct change and manipulating the turnstile with her foot.

This work may not be a fitting prelude to art, but Bashka Paeff cared very little what she did for her living. The main problem was to live while studying, and if the Boston traction company could give her her bread and butter, she was satisfied, and also grateful enough to do a fair day's work for her wages.

Now that the beginnings of fame have come to her, Miss Paeff is taking a trip to Europe for the classic study she had been denied during her student days here, and when she returns it will be to take her place in the creation of American art.

The Paeff family boasts of other talents. Her sister, Sonia, is a graduate in pianoforte of the New England Conservatory of Music and another sister, Anna, has studied piano under the celebrated Arthur Foote.

Perhaps Miss Paeff has been fortunate in not having lived in New York. If she had, it is likely we would be now writing this story in the minor mode.

Lovers of the Yiddish theater—patriots, they call them on the Yiddish street—will be doubtless surprised to learn that Celia Adler has married again, and is now Mrs. Jachiel Goldsmith, wife of one of the finest and most sincere actors that grace the Yiddish stage to-day. We have this news from a dramatic editor on one of the Yiddish dailies so that in case of misquotation we are free.

Miss Adler was formerly married to Lazar Fried, a young actor who but lately got an opportunity to show what he was worth. It was in Ossip Dimov's "Bronx Express" that Ben-Ami fell a victim to indisposition or temperament and stepped out of the cast. Fried stepped in for one night and remained for the length of the play's run. He is a sympathetic, intelligent artist who takes his work to heart, and deserves a better fate than a place in a Second Avenue theater, where he spent last season. But since the Jewish Art theater went out of existence, many young artists who could have been stars in their own right by this time, were forced to mark time.

It was recently rumored that Ludwig Satz was to take over the Irving Place Theater in New York, and make it into a Yiddish theater such as the Satz of three years ago dreamt of.

Murder of Dr. Rathenau—Rutenberg Concession—Italians on Palestine—Antisemites Rebuked by Mr. Ormsby—Gore in Parliament.

London, June 29, 1922.

Since my last letter, the world has again been startled by the murder of another well known man, Dr. Walter Rathenau. The murder of Dr. Rathenau in Berlin destroys the foremost man in German economic reconstruction. His death is to be deplored. He was a business man and an idealist. A millionaire who is also a socialist is a rare combination, and Rathenau was distinguished in both capacities. The precise purpose of his murder and those guilty of it are for the moment unknown, but his cruel fate has caused the utmost consternation throughout Germany. Dr. Rathenau was a Jew. He was born in 1867. His father organized the A. E. G. (Allgemein Elektrizitats Gesellschaft—General Electricity Company), which became a vast concern carrying out enterprises all over the world. The father was a purely business man; the son was much more. He rushed through schools and universities ahead of his contemporaries. He studied philosophy, physics, chemistry and engineering; he worked in the shops wearing overalls and learning various mechanics' jobs. He had managed in his time a number of important industrial ventures, and in 1915 became president of the A. E. G. Shortly after the beginning of the war, Dr. Rathenau was made economic dictator and as a result 80 per cent. of German industries became war industries. His books, which number nearly twenty, all have a large circulation in Germany. The most popular is "Von Kommenden Dingen," which was translated into English recently under the title of "In Days to Come." The book is a criticism of socialism and a protest against the present dominance of machinery."

Regarding the Rutenberg concession, Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons informed Captain C. T. Foxcroft on Monday that he proposed to deal with the question when the Colonial Office vote was taken. Captain Foxcroft then asked if this Pinhas Rutenberg was connected with the Pinhas Rutenberg known in Russia as the most dangerous world revolutionary and who is suspected most strongly of having murdered with his own hands the priest Gapon. In reply, Mr. Churchill stated that it was an entire delusion to imagine that Mr. Rutenberg was a Bolshevist. He was an anti-Bolshevist, and was driven out of Russia because of that. In reply to a question as to when an opportunity would be given the House for a full discussion of the concession, Mr. Chamberlain replied that it was hoped to take the Colonial Office vote next Tuesday, when the matter could be raised and the Colonial Secretary would be quite prepared to defend his action with regard to these concessions. (The discussion on the Colonial Office vote was postponed last Thursday, as I mentioned in my last letter, as an expression of sympathy with the family of the late Field Marshall Sir Henry Wilson, who was assassinated on that day.)

Attacks in all sections of the Italian press continue against the sacrifice of the liberty of the inhabitants of Palestine to "the promises made during the war by the British Government to Hebrew financiers" says "The Times" correspondent in Rome. "Signor Schanzer is called upon while in London to smooth the divergencies of opinion existing between the two governments on this important question." According to this message, dated June 27, the government has not yet received any report from Signor Schanzer, but in well informed circles it is suggested that the Italian point of view with regard to the famous Coenaculum is that the question cannot be decided by the Religious Mixed Commission provided for in the Treaty of Sevres, which refers only to those sanctuaries of Jerusalem, the attribution of which is under discussion. The Vatican yesterday sent a note to the League of Nations, repeating its point of view on the mandate and demanding respect for the rights of Christians in Palestine, and the absolute exclusion of any reconstruction of "the Kingdom of Israel," since that would put the Hebrews on a higher level than the adherents of other religions. (The Coenaculum is the traditional scene of the Last Supper. It is on an upper floor of the building which contains the traditional tomb of David just outside the walls of Jerusalem to the south of the city. It was for some time in the possession of the Franciscans, and the Sultan of Turkey transferred his rights over it to the King of Italy before the signature of the Treaty of Sevres in 1920.)

The question of Mr. Abramson's post in Palestine was raised in the House of Commons yesterday, June 28, when Sir W. Joynson Hicks asked whether it was proposed to appoint that gentleman to a post in Palestine; if so, would the Secretary of State for the Colonies say what his name was before it became Abramson, and what his nationality was before it became British. In reply Mr. Churchill said with regard to the first part of the question, Mr. Abramson has been holding a post under the Palestine administration for the last two years in the very responsible and honorable capacity of governor of one of the provinces, and it is proposed to retain his services. Regarding the second and third parts, he had no information and was not aware that there was any ground for the insinuations that they contained. Mr. Abramson had served the British Government with great credit both during and since the war. Mr. Ormsby-Gore asked, is not Mr. Abramson by faith a Christian and not a Jew? Mr. Churchill—Yes. Mr. Ormsby-Gore—Will the right honorable gentleman put a stop to these insinuations which suggest that while

THE KOSHER MEAT SCANDAL

A PRETTY mess some of our Orthodox co-religionists have made of Bosher-Kosher. For the benefit of the unitiated, let it at once be stated that a quarrel over this matter is nothing new or exciting—in fact, it is as natural and as usual as the weather, and occurs and re-occurs in periodic cycles. However, so long as the affair was merely a local family squabble, with the twelve sons of Jacob, each swearing at once, even though the tone was somewhat undignified and unbecoming, decent, well-behaved and well-mannered Jews remained undisturbed. We are even frank in admitting that we regarded the whole "business" with some little amusement and even got some fun out of it. We are confident that it was only a question of one side giving the other side a little more rope.

Machlokoth are probably the only forms of innocent excitement and sport which was given the Jewish ghettoes of the old world to enjoy. It is, therefore, natural for those of our co-religionists (who, though living in Canada, have not yet fully emancipated themselves from their old general traits) to transplant these stimulating and exciting quarrels to their new abode. There was only one reservation on which we insisted, namely, that they would have to be strictly family affairs and not open to the gaze of consequent ridicule of the rest of the general community to whom the plot, the actors, the setting, etc., of the show are foreign and, therefore, to say the least, bizzare. Since quarrels occur in the best of families, we learned to tolerate the magnified family quarrels over kosher meat, cantors, rabbis, shuhl affairs, the dead and the living, etc., etc.

For a while the Bosher-Kosher affair remained just such a family squabble. It was the annual Oberammergau of the Ward. Realizing, however, that something so wonderful, so edifying, so characteristic of all that is spiritual in Jewish life must not remain confined to the Ward alone, the actors decided to open the spectacle to the gaze of all the citizens of the city—truly an act of brotherly love and patriotism. To make the "show" somewhat more dramatic, so as to catch the eye and ear of the average citizen who might live to be one hundred and twenty years old without missing the wonders of a Bosher-Kosher fight, a stabbing was staged. For this act of heinous assault, the villain was arrested and brought to trial in the public police court, while the martyred hero was carried off the stage amidst sympathizing applause.

This, however, did not end the "show," it merely heightened the excitement. How it will conclude is not difficult to surmise. How do all Jewish quarrels end? The final curtain will be rung down on the sons of Jacob falling on one another's necks, whilst pleading for forgiveness—kiss and all will be peace again until the next quarrel.

To be sure, these spectacles do not heighten the dignity and good repute in which our non-Jewish fellow-citizens regard us. Seeing how well-behaved we are and how diligently we endeavor to keep out of the police court, they are not filled with a love and affection for us which prompts them to want to open wider the gates through which we enter this land, so that more of this same species of our co-religionists may come.

There are, however, many good Canadian Jews in Toronto and elsewhere who are asking themselves why these Bosher-Kosher scandals continue. Why must they become public spectacles which hold us up to our neighbors' justifiable ridicule and contempt? If they must be, why are they not confined in the Ghetto, and why do we permit a few of our co-religionists, who are devoid of manners, good taste and public responsibility, to scandalize and disgrace the whole community? It is easier to ask a question than to answer it. Let it be understood once and for all that the Bosher-Kosher question is not A PROBLEM OF RELIGION—IT IS A QUESTION OF FINANCE. At the bottom of the whole affair is not the fact that the schochetim have or have not a union, or that they or the butchers want a penny more or less for a pound of meat, or what would appear to be a justifiable query, is the meat kosher? All admit and take for granted the latter. Far-fetched as this may sound, the problem arises out of the relation between the Orthodox congregations and their rabbis. The average Orthodox rabbi is held in so little esteem by his congregation and is so miserably underpaid in consequence of which his family is undernourished, poorly housed, etc., etc., that in order to raise his income he is obliged to resort to the performance of practices, which when they become public, oftimes reflect to the shame not merely of the individual rabbi but to the disgrace of the whole community. In the sight of God, the rabbi may plead the plea of extenuating circumstances; but what excuse have the Orthodox congregations who place their rabbis into such economic predicaments? It should be clear to the laity involved in this scandal (whether they be a party to one side of the quarrel or the other), that if the four or five Orthodox rabbis of this city were paid a decent living wage by their congregations, the latter could forbid the former from regarding Bosher-Kosher as a source of income and under such circumstances the rabbis would be only too pleased to exercise supervision over the slaughterers, packing-houses and butcher-shops as part of their ritual religious functions; to do it, in other words, l'shmo, and not for mercenary considerations.

Since the Orthodox rabbis minister usually to more than one congregation, why should it not prove feasible for a group of synagogs to unite in remunerating their spiritual leader adequately? A federation of Orthodox synagogs could then function with their rabbis united and become a real, rather than a disgraceful, influence in Orthodox Jewish life. However, so long as the Orthodox rabbis continue to regard Bosher-Kosher, divorce, selling of wine for sacrilegious (excuse us, we mean sacramental) purposes, and many other matters too numerous to mention, as sources of income, so long as these rabbis must even be dependent for their livelihood upon these matters, so long will there be quarrels, scandals and division in the ranks of Orthodox Jewry, and what one rabbi regards as kosher, another will declare trefa. An objective examination into the real cause of the present meat scandal in Toronto will reveal the economic motive to be the only genuine cause. To settle the scandal, this motive must be removed.

Is it not a disgrace, a chillul Hashem, a desecration of the Holy Name, that Orthodox Jews, living in a free country, should fall to the level of self-degradation by creating a public scandal over a matter which they themselves regard as religious, and which is supposed to be observed in the name of Heaven? The time has come, once and for all time, to place all the cards on the table, and to call a halt to the camouflage and smoke-screens raised by all parties to the controversy. The solution, we repeat, lies in the hands of the congregations: (a) Let them pay their rabbis a decent living salary and forbid them to draw an income from Bosher-Kosher and the performance of other similar ritual functions; (b) let the union of the Orthodox congregations hold their rabbis responsible as a body, not as individuals, for supervision over the slaughterers, packing houses and butcher shops; (c) let the salaries of the schochetim, no matter by whom paid, be fixed by a joint committee representing the butchers, rabbis and congregations; (d) let the selection of those qualifying as schochetim be in the hands of a committee of the rabbis and the present schochetim union. In these simple ways lies the solution of the present scandal. It is essential that the scandal be brought to a finale before it becomes an item spread on the news pages of our dailies.

CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW,

Permit us a portion of your valuable space to express our thanks for the very valuable service rendered us by Rabbi Brickner and Judge Cohen, when our very livelihood was threatened.

The licensed officials of the city had under consideration a proposal to increase the present license fee of $1.00 per year to $20.00, and to place us in the same category as the second-hand dealers with all its formalities, limitations and supervisions.

Had this resolution passed it would have meant that the major part of 300 men would have been deprived of their only means of feeding their families, as it would have been impossible for us to comply with the many regulations. When we say that the average ages of our members is over 55 years, you can understand the rest. We therefore take this opportunity of tendering our sincerest thanks to the aforementioned gentlemen.

The despised foreigner can actually Canadianize the native-born, if Harry L. Glucksman of the Jewish Welfare Board is correct in his belief that citizenship means life and living as a member of society, and that all foreign groups have valuable contributions to make to a country. Mr. Glucksman knows what social workers now believe, after coming into the light through a labyrinth of past mistakes, namely, that natives stand in need of training in citizenship as well as foreigners do. This citizenship he talks about, is not the old-style kind that was a matter of singing patriotic songs in a loud tone or the recitation of pledges of allegiance. These things are pleasant, but they do not make a real citizen of the rag peddler who meets with unkind treatment in his daily life. The man's daily experience at the hands of the native-born who speak the language of the country, is so important that the burden of Canadianization or Americanization rests as heavily upon those already established here as it does upon those who want to become a part of the life of the country.

Mr. Nahum Sokolow seems to have been impressed with the fact that the United States House of Representatives passed the Zionist resolution—and grateful besides. "We had the rare opportunity to be here," he said, before sailing for Europe, "at a time when our ideal was crowned with the support of the Senate, House and President Harding." Congressman Fish, who knows all about elections and the Jewish vote and proposed the resolution, gave an inkling of just what this "support" is really worth when he said that any one could back the resolution with fervor because its passage did not commit the United States to an entangling alliance, an obligation to use military or naval force, or the expenditure of money in any form. Sponsors of the resolution are said to be delighted with the result, for some reason or other. The official vote was entered as unanimous, with a few nays almost inaudible, and the representatives adjourned for the summer, very warm, but just a little more certain of quite a number of votes.

The Central Conference of American Rabbis, in recent solemn session assembled, reiterated its former liberal stand on economic issues, declaring that struggles between labor and capital can be settled peacefully; that political prisoners still confined because of anti-war utterances, should be liberated; that both government and public should adopt a more liberal attitude toward immigration. But what got into all the papers was not so much of this as it was of the resolution which said, "In view of Jewish teachings and in keeping with the spirit of the age and the traditions of the conference, women cannot be denied the privilege of ordination." And now that women have been officially approved as rabbis, will there be a mad rush for the Hebrew Union College? It is our humble opinion that there won't be, if for no other reason than that the girls didn't think of it first themselves.

News dispatches say that the Soviet Government has no objection to Russian Jews emigrating to the United States. Judging from the present unpleasantness at Harvard and Annapolis and part of the avowed platform of the Ku Klux Klan, the Americans might be just as glad to facilitate the departure of American Jews to Russia.

Surrogate Wingate of Kings County Court, New York, recently refused to grant the request of a 16-year-old Jewish boy for the appointment of a Brooklyn Baptist minister as guardian, on the ground that it was not within his judicial province to determine whether an immature person had done wisely to alter his religious faith. We refer this case to those missionaries who derive their board and keep from proselytizing with a sheaf of religious pamphlets in one hand and a bouquet of lolly-pops in the other.

The Irving Place Theater is now leased by Max Willner, who has a disastrous season, saved only by the intervention of Bertha Kalisch, who appeared there for some months.

The Satz rumor had given the idea that New York was to have a new theater that would be an intelligent home for Jewish theatrical art, for Ludwig Satz is to-day the greatest of the Yiddish actors, if one may judge by his work of a few years ago. No matter whether the role was insignificant, if Satz had it, it became a striking conception long to be remembered in the spectator's mind. His art is extraordinary. He knows no limitations; his imagination embraces every character and every emotion. While he was given the opportunity he dazzled all by his brilliant performances.

A theater under Satz's direction would be an assurance of the bond-in-common spirit between himself and his artists, a spirit conspicuously lacking in other "art theater" ventures.

And to put a concluding paragraph to our Yiddish theater commentary, let us observe that Samuel S. Grossman is devoting himself to the interests of the Yiddish Art Theater and Maurice Schwartz. Mr. Grossman used to be the director of entertainments of the Jewish Bureau of Education in New York in the days of the Dr. Benderly regime and established a nice reputation for clever children's playlets. Since then he has trudged the steps of English-Jewish journalism and recently had his first success in the world at large when his translation of "Samson and Delilah" for Ben-Ami and Arthur Hopkins ran a season in New York.

Mr. Grossman began his new work seriously with a laudatory article on Maurice Schwartz in a recent issue of the "Jewish Tribune." In it he characterized Mr. Schwartz as a "motorized kaleidoscope, a ceaseless array of colors and forms, a manifestation of countless interests." Your admiration for Mr. Grossman's fertility in enthusiastic expression will be increased if we tell you that he well knows Satz, Ben-Ami, Rubin, and others of their company.

Not long ago the entire country was roused by the story of a Syracuse college boy, a star athlete whose neck was broken in a football game, but who eventually recovered, as much through superb courage as through the expertness of his physicians. A reader, considerate of our weekly labor, sent us a clipping from a college paper containing an appreciation of this boy, Harry Herbert, written by Irving Rosenwald. It is altogether needful that this appreciation have a wider circulation that than afforded by the college paper and so we reprint hereunder:

"When a young man inspired by the encouraging cheers of frenzied football fans displays courage and grit, we are sometimes led by our emotions to overestimate the real merit of his act. But in the case of Fra Harry Herbert, there can be no possible exaggeration of the bravery he displayed throughout all his sufferings endured for his Alma Mater.

"Though handicapped by a wrenched back, he entered the ill-fated Syracuse-Colgate game on November 12th, 1921. The unfortunate accident, wherein he broke his neck is now a matter of past record, yet his cheerfulness despite two major operations and during weeks of insufferable pain in a plaster cast must be a source of inspiration to others.

"In both of the operations Fra Herbert was in the immediate danger of death. The slightest pressure on the spinal cord would have been fatal. Although the operations were successful, it was necessary to encase his head, shoulders, and body in plaster.

"During his eleven weeks' stay at the hospital in Syracuse, Fra Harry was a most cheerful patient. Practically everyone at the University visited him and all were impressed with his high spirits. Chancellor James Roscoe Day called to promise the full support of the authorities. "Chick" Meehan, coach of the football team, called to offer his sympathy. But best of all was Fra Dr. Cooper, under whose able and untiring efforts the patient rallied and recovered.

"Fra Dr. Cooper accompanied Fra Harry to Mt. Sinai Hospital, New York City, where on January 28th, the cast was removed from his body. Harry intends keeping the cast as a memento, for it bears the signatures of his many well wishers.

"Fra Herbert has now completely recovered and is now at his home town, Hartford, Conn. The Sigma Alpha Mu Alumni Club, of Hartford, gave him a rousing welcome and testimonial banquet. He will soon return to Syracuse to resume his study of law.

"His wonderful display of grit that has won many a victory for his Alma Mater, that has won for him his fight to live, will surely win for him great success in the future."

In an out-of-town contemporary, we came across a story of the Howard boys, Willie and Eugene, stars of the Winter Garden, wherein was described how the comedians were guests at a small Jewish club, the "Sholom Aleichem Circle," of Milwaukee and spoke to the members of Antisemitism and sang for them Hebrew songs. The Howards are the sons of a cantor, as we informed you in one of our exposes some time ago, but that Broadway stars should go to the length of remembering their native tongue and melodies is remarkable and moves us to say enthusiastically and pridefully that the Howard boys are worthy members of the Rabbis' Sons' Theatrical Association.

POGROM PROPAGANDA FOSTERED BY POLISH POLICE

Lodz (J.P.A.)—The local council of the "Rosvoy" has posted placards all over the city, making charges of the gravest character against the Jewish population, and calling upon the Polish citizenry to wage uncompromising warfare on their Jewish compatriots.

The Jews of the city are enraged at the police, which permits and protects these libellous placards.

A Jewish young man, Moses Zach, of Tarnow, sought to tear down one of these placards. He was immediately arrested by the police, and is held on the charge of "malicious destruction of others' property."

A Dentist Must Have Patience

A Story by Elma Ehrlich Levinger

(Copyright 1922, by Elma Ehrlich Levinger, all rights reserved)

"Nu," said Mrs. Ignatz Kahnweiler, removing her near-minx cloak and smoothing her checked sports skirt over her ample hips, "nu, I know it ain't so easy for a young man to get started, so I bring you my cavities. I told Ignatz this morning, 'nebbich, a dentist must have patients.'"

"He certainly needs patience to get along with relatives," murmured young Dr. Lorber, but choked back the pun in time as he remembered that his tactful aunt had forwarded a goodly portion of his tuition at college. "Well, sit down in the chair, auntie, and I'll see what I can do for you."

"I told your uncle I thought I owed it to myself to go to an experienced dentist," went on auntie, stretching out in the very new-looking chair and surveying her vampish sandals with a thoughtful air. "But, then, I said to him: 'Ignatz, I ain't so young no more and my teeth will last me my time, anyhow, even if they ain't done just so. And, why should I pay good money to a real dentist, when they're all gonophs? Don't Joe owe me two thousand dollars for sending him through his school, so I can just take it off what he owes me.' Ain't that so, Joe?" with the somewhat fat coyness of the lady long since forty.

Joe, busy sterilizing his instruments, nodded politely, although he longed to strangle her. As though the old lady really needed him to pay her back at all. While a twenty-five dollar check—he felt the work would be worth at least that, even before he looked into her mouth—would have helped a little toward calming the telephone company and the fellow-dentist who sold him his second-hand instrument cabinet on time. But all he said was: "I'll just see what you need, auntie, and then I'll give you an appointment. I don't want to begin anything much, 'cause it's getting late and I'm expecting several patients in any minute." This after a prolonged interview with his very new engagement book.

His aunt favored him with a withering glance. "Nu, once I get up my courage to come down here," she told him, "I ain't going back without getting something fixed up, anyhow. Even if I'm relations, I ain't going to be kicked out for strangers. And I guess you don't get so many patients yet, anyhow," with one of her shrewd looks.

"Plenty of 'em — plenty of 'em," with airy pride. "I'm expecting several now. Let's have a look auntie. A little wider, please. Y—es, quite a cavity, but we'll fix it in no time. And, maybe, when we have more time a crown ——"

"A nice gold one," said Mrs. Kahnweiler, beaming with satisfaction. "The very best gold. Thank God, your uncle can afford it and he don't grudge me nothing within reason. And the gold won't cost so terrible much if you don't get paid for the work. In cash, I mean. God knows when we get back what we give you and I ain't saying nothing about the interest, neither."

The little bell on the outside door jangled. Joe peeped out into the box-like reception room; of course, it might be only the gas bill or— But it was a patient!

And such a patient. Although she held her wisp of handkerchief to her cheek, the toothache had not bloated her face or marred her carefully prepared pink and white complexion. About eighteen or so, starry-eyed, bobbed brown curls with a glint of gold escaping from under her soft hat. Joe began to feel that with such patients a man might be said to love his work.

"Good afternoon," he said, trying to be very professional. "You came to ——"

The bell jangled again and another patient entered. A young man with what Joe characterized as a rah-rah air, due, perhaps to his collegian type of cap and clothes, since his face was prematurely grave with a hint of suffering about the mouth.

"I've a terrible toothache," began the newcomer abruptly. "I'll have to have it out, I'm afraid. Do you give gas?"

"I beg your pardon," The young woman's tone was rather frosty. "I am in a very great hurry, so if you will attend to me right away ——"

"It never rains but what it pours," murmured the over-worked dentist. "And auntie's in the chair—just my luck." Aloud: "I'll be with you in a moment, madam. If you care to read—" with a wave toward the magazines on the very new oak table.

The girl took up a copy of the "Pictorial Review"—several months old. "I do," she said with what Joe considered unnecessary emphasis. "And I hope I won't be disturbed." She sent an almost fiery glance toward the young man in the college cap, and curled up in the big leather chair near the window. "And please look at my teeth as soon as you can. I'm suffering terribly."

"Joe," came appealingly from the inner room. "Joe, for God's sake, are you going to keep me waiting all night? Even if I am relations ——"

A murderous look glittered in Joe's eyes. "I beg your pardon!" but he exhibiting his air of professional politeness for the benefit of the two paying patients, not the stout lady in the dentist chair. "I have a patient, but I'll attend to you as quickly as possible. Even if I have to strangle her to get rid of her," he added fiercely to himself.

"Yes, please hurry," urged the male sufferer from the corner of the leather davenport. "Or I'm afraid I'll have to go to another dentist."

Joe went back to auntie with the terrible threat ringing in his ears. And the Lord knew what work these people needed, but he couldn't hold them. • • • "Sorry I had to keep you waiting so long, Auntie," he said cheerfully. "Now I'll just fill this cavity in a jiffy and next time we'll talk about crowns."

Outside in the box-like reception room, the young woman surveyed the fashions of month before last with world-weary eyes, while the young man glowered at her with all the tragedy of his twenty-one years in his face. At last he could stand it no longer.

"See here, Marjorie," he began hoarsely. "I'm not going to stand it, You've got to listen to me."

The flapper raised her curvey eyebrows. "Even if you were rude enough to follow me in here, I hope you're enough of a gentleman to leave me alone," she answered without raising her eyes from the thrilling article on "Vitamines in the Family Diet," she had been reading.

"Guess I got as much right to come and see a dentist as you've got. Now, as I was trying to tell you over the telephone ——"

"I believe I cut you off then— I wish I could now, but I can't. When I ran into you downstairs I thought you wouldn't dare to follow me, so I came up here. But ——"

"But you looked over your shoulder twice to see if I was following you," stated the young man. "I saw you do it. You know you're as anxious to make up as I am."

"Walter Rosenkranz," said the young woman coldly and distinctly, "you're a terrible liar. I'm glad I'm through with you forever. If you'd ever given me anything of value, I'd give it back and ——"

"That's right," jeered the unhappy lover. "Throw it up to me I ain't been giving you platinum bracelets and solitaire engagement rings, 'cause I'm not graduated yet and God knows when the dentist business 'll pay me so as I can get married. But you're like all the other Jewish girls in New York. All you want out of a fellow is flowers and Park and Tilford five-pounders and taxis ——"

"I guess Lillie Houser gets enough taxi rides out of you if you can afford 'em or not," accused Marjorie with somewhat vulgar frankness. "Didn't you take her in a taxi to the Relief Dance for Lithuanian Jews and didn't my cousion, Phyllis Holzberger call me up the next morning and tell me ——?"

Walter fairly bounded across the room. "So that's what's been making you sore?" he exploded. "Why didn't you jump me right away and get a

Waking up a Toronto Watchman

—how it reduced an insurance premium

OUR engineer found that the watchman employed by a new client of ours did not make regular rounds or carry a standard clock.

When our recommendations for a new clock and more speed for the watchman were carried out, the fire insurance premium went down $66. Incidentally the watchman began to really earn his salary.

Hardly a day passes that we are not able to suggest ways and means to reduce insurance costs.

Perhaps we can help you, too.

Make us the Insurance Department of your business—without a dollar's added cost.

POLISH JEWS TO GIVE PART OF EARNINGS TO FAMINE VICTIMS IN RUSSIA

Warsaw (J.P.A.)—At a convention of Jewish Rabbis, held last week in Lodz, it was voted to call upon all Jewish merchants and tradesmen to give a percentage of their surplus income for the benefit of the starving Jews in Russia. Much is expected from this self-imposed taxation, towards the Relief Fund now being gathered for the Russian Famine victims.

NEW SUNDAY LAW IN LITHUANIA

Kovno (J. P. A.)—The Lithuanian Government is preparing a new Sunday law for submission to Parliament when it reconvenes.

A consultation was had with the Jewish spokesmen to ascertain and incorporate their points of view in the proposed measure.

HAMILTON

Arthur Pellow, 40 Head Street, was found guilty by Magistrate Jelfs, of disturbing the services of the Jewish Synagog on Cannon St. Officials of the Synagog recognised him as one of the gang of young men who had been constantly annoying the worshippers by throwing stones in the door and creating a disturbance generally. He was fined $25 and bound over to keep the peace with $100.

JEWS BOYCOTT THE CHALUZIM

Lemberg (J.P.A.)—Several scores of Chaluzim, who came to Chartkow from the Ukraine, find themselves outcasts, boycotted by the Jews who give them no work, even excluding them from work on the public buildings. The Kehillah is now constructing a public bath with the funds donated by the American Relief Committee, and even though there are among the Chaluzim many artisans who are qualified to do some of the work in the construction of the bath-houses, the executive committee has decided to give the work to the Gentiles rather than to the Chaluzim under the pretext that the latter are incompetent to do the work.

The economic status of the Chaluzim is tragic indeed. They have become veritable tramps, without shelter, save the starry heavens above and without food save that given to them by some charitable person, in whom the milk of human kindness still flows.

POGROM AGITATION IN LODZ; BUND DEPUTIES DEMAND ITS SUPPRESSION

Lodz (J.P.A.)—The constant pogrom agitation of the local "Rozvoy" has begun to bear fruit. Recently there have been made systematic and organized assaults upon Jewish promenewis in the public streets of the city. Especially intensive has been this campaign of violent Antisemitism in the Shenkewitch and Poniatowsky Parks, which are crowded on Saturdays and Sundays with Jewish men and women, taking their leisure stroll there.

One of the magistrates of the city sent an official communication on the subject to the Municipal Police, demanding that it take steps to safeguard the freedom of its citizenship. Although this has had a salutory effect upon the police, who have been spurred to greater activities against the disturbers of the peace, it is still unsafe for Jews to venture forth into the public streets, and the atmosphere is surcharged with the danger of explosive pogrom spirit, which might flame forth at the first opportunity.

The Bundist Councillors have brought into the City Council sharp and piercing interpellations concerning the incessant pogrom propaganda so vigorously conducted. Attention is called to the beclouding effect of this propaganda upon the approaching elections, and the danger of injecting the race question into the pre-election campaign. Drastic measures are demanded to suppress the peril of this constant pogrom agitation.

How often has that "not-just-right" feeling assailed you when you had a difficult business deal to put through and you particularly desired to be at your best?
You're irritable and don't know why.

An old time resident of Manitoba has passed away in the person of Mrs. Sarah Coblentz, who died on Tuesday, July 18th, at her home, 516 McDermott Ave. Mrs. Coblentz with her husband Adolph Coblentz who predeceased her six months ago, came to Winnipeg in 1878. For twenty-four years the deceased lived at Gretna, Manitoba, where her husband was in business, settling again in Winnipeg in 1909. Mrs. Coblentz had just entered her seventy-eighth year, having been born at Philadelphia on July 2nd, 1845. By the kindness of her disposition, she had endeared herself to a very large circle of friends. She leaves to mourn her loss, three sons and two daughters, Godfrey, and Isaac, of Gretna, Manitoba, William, Mrs. E. A. Frankfurter and Mrs. P. Stephany, of Winnipeg.

MONTREAL

Jews appear to be determined to lead the way in all activities, communal, domestic or otherwise. Their latest triumph is in the field of matrimony. In an investigation undertaken by one of the local newspapers into the marriage figures for this city during the present year as compared with past years, it was found that all religious denominations except the Jewish had to report substantial decreases. Only among the Jews did the figures remain very nearly constant. In spite of hard times, in spite of financial depression, the course of true love seems to run a little more smoothly in Jewish hearts than elsewhere. Perhaps romance springs a little more eternal in Jewish than in other breasts, and its promptings refuse to be silenced for merely mundane considerations.

The threatened strike to which we referred last week, and which would affect Jewish manufacturers and Jewish workers almost exclusively, seems about to become a reality. Its proportions, however, appear to have dwindled amazingly. Strangely enough, it has the tacit approval of some of the large manufacturing concerns of this city, for it is directed, not against them, but against the small "social shops" (apparently disguised sweat shops) which have sprung up recently. The large manufacturers would be just as pleased as the workers to see these disappear, as they constitute a thorn in the side of the clothing industry, sanctioning, as they do, conditions of labor which all unite in condemning. The strike is expected to be of short duration.

Dr. A. Singalovsky and Dr. Leon Bramson, members of the executive of "The Society for the Promotion of Trade and Agriculture among the Jews"—commonly known as the "Ort"—addressed a mass meeting in Prince Arthur Hall on Monday evening, appealing for the support of Montreal Jewry in the undertakings of the society. The society has as its aim the training of Jews to become artisans and agriculturists, and to participate actively in the industrial and economic development of whatever land they inhabit. It has been extremely successful in its activities, but needs financial assistance in order to carry on properly. Dr. Bramson and Dr. Singalovsky have come to America for the express purpose of obtaining the help which the society needs.

Dr. and Mrs. Louis Gross arrived in Montreal from England last week, and expect to stay here until September. Dr. Gross, who for many years has been doing brilliant research work in pathology at McGill University and the Royal Victoria Hospital, left last autumn for London on a research scholarship, and he has been working under Sir Arthur Keith during the past year. He intends to return to England next September to continue a course of study and research extending over several years. Mrs. Gross (Miss Gertie Gittleson) has been studying music in London.

Dr. H. N. Segall has received an appointment at the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston, Mass., and leaves Montreal to take up his duties there next September. Dr. Segall has been connected with the staff of the McGill Medical School during the past two years as demonstrator in pathology and bacteriology, and assistant curator of the pathological museum.

The Montefiore Hebrew Orphans' Home, which is in need of funds to continue its work properly, announces a tag day for August 21. An appeal has been made to the Jewish young women of Montreal to volunteer their services for the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Levin, Western Avenue, Westmount, are sailing for England on July 28, by the S.S. Montcalm. They expect to spend about two months in Europe, visiting most of the larger continental cities.

EGYPTIAN JEWS DEMAND REPRESENTATION IN PARLIAMENT

Cairo (J.P.A.)—The spokesmen of the Egypt Jewish Kehillah have presented to the government a resolution demanding the right and opportunity of electing their own deputy to represent them in Parliament.

The recently adopted constitution of free Egypt provides for minority national rights and for self-government in all matters pertaining to their own communal interests.

At the same time the Constitution provides for proportional representation of 1 representative to each 75,000 inhabitants. As the number of Jewish inhabitants is but 50,000, there is danger that the Jews will not be able to elect their own national representative.

It is expected, however, that the other Egyptian parties will nominate several prominent Jews as their candidates for Parliament.

EXCOMMUNICATION CEREMONY IN JERUSALEM!

Jerusalem (J.P.A.)—The Holy City has again witnessed an official excommunication ceremony with all of its solemnities and significations.

Two orthodox fanatics, whose names are well known in the community, have recently published a pamphlet, bitterly and libellously attacking the Jerusalem Rabbinate. As there was no direct evidence, however, to prove their authorship, it was impossible to mention them by name in the anathema curse, and the proceedings had to be conducted against the anonymous writers of the booklet.

At the appointed hour the rabbis of the city assembled in the Central Synagog, lighted black candles, blew the trumpets, and then pronounced the curse of anathema against the unknown authors.

And the local press, so progressive and devoted to the "freedom of speech and press," has not even found it necessary to protest against this relic of darkest medievalism.

ORT HOLDS EXHIBITION IN LIBAU

Riga (J.P.A.)—The local Ort dressmaking school has staged an exhibition of all garments and dresses made by the students of the school. The exhibition proved to be a tremendous success, all the garments being sold for very high prices.

fellow out of hot water? I couldn't help taking Lillie Houser to that fool dance. Her mother's one of the machers in that bunch and she got up the Litvak dance and had hundreds of tickets to sell. So Lillian invited me. And I didn't dare turn her down—they've got such a terrible large family and I want to keep all the friends I can, 'cause you need 'em when you open your office and have to sit around waiting for patients. And she gave me two extra tickets for my brother Ike and his girl and I made Ike pay for the taxi. But, honest, Marjorie, I didn't enjoy it a single minute; I was missing you all the time and wishing I was dancing with you. That Lillie can't even keep step and she's not the kind of a girl a fellow likes to take out, anyhow. Now, when a girl makes your appearance ——"

"What did she wear?" asked Marjorie, hiding her satisfaction. "That green tulle of hers that makes her look so fat?"

"I should know. I never know what another girl wears but you and you know it. And then you don't give me a chance to explain over the telephone, and run upstairs away from me like this and ——"

The young lady threw down her magazine and began to readjust her wool scarf. "I knew you'd follow me," she confessed shamelessly. "And I knew this would be a good place to talk as soon as I saw Dr. Lorber's sign downstairs. 'Cause my cousin Milton was in his graduating class last month and you know there's never anybody waiting in these beginners' reception rooms."

"But he's got a patient in there now. Let's make our get-away before he gets through with her. But first——" and the impulsive dental student pulled his lady love out into the dark hallway for a forgiving kiss.

A moment later, Mrs. I. Kahnweiler sailed into the deserted reception room, fastening her near-minx cloak as she came. "Nu, I'll come Thursday if you say so," she conceded resentfully. "But you could finish me up in one job if you wanted to. But it's always like that; if a person's mishpocha she gets slighted, no matter what you owe her." She shot a glance of black suspicion over her broad shoulder. "I thought you said you had two patients out here waiting for you," she accused.

"I told 'em to come back to-morrow," Joe lied brazenly. "And they were my first paying patients, too," he muttered, as he went back to sterilize his very new instruments.

BRANCH OF THE "ORT" ORGANIZED IN TORONTO

The latest branch of the "Ort" to be organized in Canada was formed last week in Toronto, when Dr. Singalowsky and Dr. Bramson, both European delegates, came to the city and addressed a conference of Jewish labor organizations. A committee was elected to carry on a campaign of propaganda with the view of educating public opinion as to the significance of the "Ort" project, and of obtaining the financial support that the organization merits. A number of influential men in town have already been chosen by the committee to do the necessary work of propaganda. Mr. J. L. Cohen was elected secretary of the committee.

A large mass meeting, with Dr. Singalowsky and Dr. Bramson, is now being arranged for August 13. Both delegates are well known as social workers, and Dr. Bramson is especially noted for his gallant fight on behalf of Jewish freedom in Russia while Deputy in the First Russian Duma.

Now that the peak of Jewish misery in eastern Europe is considered definitely passed, and with the rather sharp decline of the need for immediate help for the starving Jewish population, Jewish public opinion in the United States is quickly veering towards the view that something should be done to put the erstwhile recipients of charity on a sound economic basis, to the end that Jewry in the war-stricken countries may finally become self-supporting. This view, generally held as a theory, has now ripened into a definite plan of action, since the European delegation of the "Ort" (Russian initials of "Society for Promotion of Manual Trades and Farming among the Jews") has toured the country, preaching the gospel of Jewish economic rehabilitation and organizing branches of the "Ort" in many American and Canadian cities.
